

Student Financial Aid Committee

Procedures

This policy-oriented committee reviews and advises the development of the philosophy and policies that govern the financial aid administration. This committee does not review individual decisions on applicants. This committee may also review and evaluate the success of the aid program and make budget projections and recommendations for continued support.

The committee does not need to be concerned about or responsible for selecting the recipients of financial aid as much as why and how to distribute aid and measuring its effect on reaching the goals/mission of Tennessee Tech University. This committee uses statistics and research that benchmark its activity against national and local norms. It should consider the degree to which the aid program approaches standards established by federal, state and institutional regulations. It should actively assess the program's current and future budgetary needs.
