LORRI GLOVER, PH.D.
Professor of History, Saint Louis University

Dr. Lorri Glover teaches at Saint Louis University, where she holds the John Francis Bannon endowed chair in history. She has written extensively about early America, from the seventeenth century to the nineteenth.

Glover has published works concerning siblings and kinship in South Carolina, masculinity in the Early Republic, the seventeenth-century colonization of Virginia and its sister settlement Bermuda, the intersection of family and politics in the lives of leading American Revolutionaries, and, most recently, the contentious debates over ratification of the U.S. Constitution in 1787-1788. Her latest works include Founders as Fathers: The Private Lives and Politics of the American Revolutionaries and, with Craig Thompson Friend, Death and the American South. Her current research interest is a biography on Eliza Lucus Pinckney.

Glover received her undergraduate degree from the University of North Alabama and her master's degree from Clemson University. She received her Ph.D. From the University of Kentucky.
